Southeast News.

Bismarck Gazette.

The Derby shaft, the nearest mine to Bismarck, has been closed down. No mining has been done there since last May, although they have kept the water pumped out. Now they have sealed up the drifts and taken out the pumps. Not lack of ore, but the low price of lead, is given as the cause of the close-down.

An Advance dispatch to the St. Louis Republic, dated Jan. 29, says: "The search for Gale Day, who disappeared Jan. 14 while hunting in an old field near here, has been thoroughly examined, but no trace of the missing man found. John Mahaffy of Sharpsboro says he met Day the Sunday night after his disappearance. The man was walking toward Delta, carrying two suit cases and a shotgun.

We learn from last week's Fredericktown Democrat-News that on the 24th inst., at his home on Dry creek, in Madison county, Ben F. Stevens, aged 28 years, shot and killed his wife, Emily Stevens, aged 20, and then killed himself. There had been trouble between the parties and Mr. Stevens had entered suit for divorce, charging adultery. They had met at the home by agreement to divide up their household goods.

At DeSoto last Saturday two hundred and fifty members of the Boosters' club met and placed that organization on record as opposed to the parcels post bill now pending before congress. A resolution was passed asking the representative from this district and the United States senators from Missouri to use their influence to defeat the bill. The members of the club think that such a law would menace the commercial interests of the small cities and rural districts.

It is current rumor in railroad circles that the Houck interests are soon to be transferred to the Frisco, rather to the disgust of the people of Cape Girardeau, who were anxious to have the property go to the Illinois Central, the Louisville and Nashville, or any other system that would break up the monopoly the Frisco is having and using to the detriment they say of that city and its business interests. Whether the projected road from Cape Girardeau and Charleston to Hickman, Ky., will be built or not is not mentioned.

Flat River News.

Congressman-elect Walter L. Hensley has returned home from the great democratic conference at Baltimore and the democratic congressional caucus at Washington filled with the enthusiasm that marked both of these meetings. In common with all Missourians he is elated over the unanimous selection of Champ Clark as speaker of the next house. Mr. Hensley doesn't think it is likely that President Taft will call an extra session to revise the tariff. The congressional caucus was the largest on record, there being present 220 members-elect out of a total of 228.
